MAINE SCIENTISTS

Discover Rare Metals in Nova Scotia Gold Mines.

From volume 16 of the Journal of the Mining Society of Nova Scotia, it appears that two Maine men, C. Vey Holman, late State geologist of Maine, and Dr. W. W. Knight, of Portland, in conducting research work on the ores of the gold-bearing rocks of Nova Scotia, principally in the Holman mine at Caribou gold mines, are credited with several most important discoveries of great interest to the mining and scientific world. Among these are the first recorded discovery of platinum in place in the province, as well as the first reported occurrences of tellurium and selenium in the gold-bearing ores.

These researches, which are detailed at length in an elaborate and valuable paper, prepared for the society by Dr. Knight at the request of Mr. Holman, who is the principal owner of the Caribou gold district, also includes the significant discovery that the circulating mine waters of the district carry gold in solution, which is deposited by precipitation as it comes in contact with pyrite and other precipitants of gold occurring in the underground rock formations of the mines there.

In other words, instead of the gold-making process having entirely ceased geological aeons ago, it is still in active progress in these gold fields. This is a fact that, though often suspected, has been scientifically demonstrated in but one or two places in the world.

Nearly 30,000,000 acres of wheat were raised throughout India this year.

FOUND DEAD IN CELL.

Andrew Bentzon, Under Sentence of Five Years in State Prison.

Andrew Bentzon, of Bar Harbor, was found dead in bed in his cell at the county jail Sunday morning. Bentzon was sentenced Friday to five years in State prison on an indictment for rape, to which he had pleaded guilty. He was remanded to the county jail to await removal to Thomaston.

Coroner Harry C. Austin was notified, and deemed an inquest unnecessary. While Bentzon was known to be in poor health, County Attorney Graham thought that under the circumstances an autopsy was advisable, and Medical Examiner E. J. Morrison performed an autopsy Monday afternoon. Nothing was found to indicate death by other than natural causes, but the stomach was sent to the Maine medical school for an analysis of its contents. Until the result of this analysis is known no definite report can be made.

Bentzon was about fifty-three years of age. He obtained a divorce from his wife at the October term last year. He has two sons living in Worcester, Mass.

Rev. P. A. A. Killam conducted prayers at the undertaking rooms of H. C. Austin & Co. Monday. The body was deposited in the vault at Woodbine cemetery, where it will be interred.

Fire at Waltham.

WALTHAM, Oct. 25 (special)—The mills of Wilson Googins and Herman Jordan at Webb's brook were burned last night. The fire started in the Googins mill and jumped across the brook to the Jordan mill.

How the fire originated is a mystery. Mr. Googins intended starting up his mill this week, and men were working about the mill yesterday.

The Googins mill was built last year. It was a small mill, but was well equipped. Mr. Googins' loss is estimated at $2,000. He had no insurance.

The Jordan mill was the old Haslam mill. The buildings were old, but the mill was well equipped. The loss on this mill is about $3,000; insurance, $2,000.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week
Beginning Oct. 29, 1911.

Topic.—A missionary journey around the world.—X. Missions in Europe.—Acts xvi, 1-15. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The introduction of Christianity into Europe is of vital interest to us for the reason that it was the final step in missions that assured Christianity to our forefathers and through them to us. It is of importance also because Europe became the first distinctive Christian continent of the world and demonstrated what Christianity can do for nations and races as well as individuals. Through Europe, Christianity came to America, and from Europe and America have gone forth the missionaries of modern times to evangelize the world. Thus we can see even in this brief glance at several important facts what momentous issues were involved when Paul, the apostle to the gentiles, obeyed the divine call to preach the gospel in Europe in answer to the prayer of the Macedonian, "Come over into Macedonia and help us."

The early history of Christianity in Europe is the history of the great movement by which the strategic center of missionary activity was transferred from Antioch, in Syria, to Rome. The leaders of the new religious movement were divinely led to select the most strategic points from which to propagate their beliefs. Jerusalem was naturally the first center, because the gospel was first preached to the Jews. But Jerusalem was inadequate for gentle activity, and the movement was transferred to Antioch, a great, thriving gentile city. As the movement spread, Antioch became insufficient, and gradually the center of Christian activity was removed to Rome, the capital of the Roman empire, which was then practically synonymous with the world. From Rome their "line" went out through all the earth and their words unto the end of the world. Paul did not found the Christian church at Rome, although he had much to do with the development of the church in the imperial city.

It is not known for a certainty that Peter ever even visited Rome. The human founder is unknown, but the hand of God is clearly seen, and the purpose which He had in view is clearly understood. From Rome as a center, the world was to be evangelized, and before three centuries had passed away Constantine, the Roman emperor, had recognized Christianity as the religion of the empire. The history of these great movements reads like fiction, but nothing is impossible with God. It is this fact that is the basis of our belief that the modern world will be won for Christ.

The work of evangelizing Europe after the Christianization of the Roman empire went steadily forward. Missionaries from Asia Minor visited the people along the Danube river and first preached the gospel in Germany. But it was contact with Rome that led the German races into the Christian fold. Roman missionaries carried the glad tidings to Spain and to England. Charlemagne completed the work among the Franks. Thus all Europe was won and became the seat of the vast struggles by which the creeds of Christendom were developed and the various divisions of the Christian church as they exist today were determined. It is a mighty story, and all the while God was unfolding His plans and purposes and preparing for the great modern movement for worldwide evangelization. In this great movement we may have a part, and the recollection of the great deeds of the past should inspire us with new zeal and energy in all our missionary interests and activity.

BIBLE READINGS.

Pa. II, Isa. III, 1-7; Dan. xii, 3; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; John III, 16; Acts I, 8; xlii, 44-49; xvii, 15-34; xviii, 1-12; xix, 1-12; Rom. I, 14-17; II Tim. IV, 6-8.

A Summary of Suggestions.

Shall these, then, be our ambitions and our efforts for the biennium which is before us?

1. As an international organization, the promotion of worldwide peace.
2. As an interdenominational organization, a still wider fellowship of all young Christians.
3. As state organizations, field secretaries who will promote our principles and our fellowship in every section.
4. As a local organization—
 - a. A campaign of education in every society.
 - b. A campaign of efficiency, promoted by careful rating of faithful service, in every society.
 - c. A simple form for opening and closing our meetings in every society, which shall emphasize our unity and demonstrate our fellowship.—Dr. Clark's Suggestions in the President's Address at Christian Endeavor Convention in Atlantic City Convention.

A Newswy Business Bit.

The busy world knows in a general way that Christian Endeavor is the name of a great young people's movement, but comparatively few know the tremendous fact that not one of its members has ever been taxed one cent for its support, nor the other tremendous fact that, aside from paying all its running expenses for twenty-five years, the publishing department has enabled the united society to contribute nearly a quarter of a million dollars to worldwide work for young people.—H. N. Lathrop.

Mutual Benefit Column.

EDITED BY "AUNT MADGE"

Its Motto: "Helpful and Hopeful."

The purposes of this column are succinctly stated in the title and motto—It is for the mutual benefit, and thus to be helpful and hopeful. Being for the common good, it is for the common use—a public servant, a purveyor of information and suggestion, a medium for the interchange of ideas. In this capacity it solicits communications, and its success depends largely on the support given it in this respect. Communications must be signed, but the name of writer will not be printed except by permission. Communications will be subject to approval or rejection by the editor of the column, but none will be rejected without good reason. Address all communications to

THE AMERICAN,
Ellsworth, Me.

FOR THE SHUT-INS OF THE M. B. C. C. S.

Look up, lift up, be joyful ever,
In cloud or sunshine,
Discouraged never.
If dark the path, the storm clouds
Hover o'er us, remember Him
Who trod the way before us,
Be of good cheer, He knoweth best,
Look up, lift up, and be at rest.
Look up, lift up, ye weary ones,
Thy feeble hands shall He uphold,
Thy feet, tho' bruised and torn,
E'en shall be healed.
And tho' the scars of battles
Fought with pain,
Shall mar the perfect form,
Within thy heart shall struggles cease,
Look up, lift up, and be at peace.

E. C. S.

To E. C. S. I extend thanks for the poems of hope and trust and cheer she furnishes occasionally for the column. We do not realize in how many ways we may minister to others. It may be by material aid or by spiritual up-lift; by words of encouragement or by lending a helping hand. Sometimes by listening, sometimes by doing, and no doubt many opportunities for ministration are passed by, not intentionally, but for lack of observation or of intuition.

Dear Aunt Madge:

I have just returned from a four months' trip which has taken me through sections of the West and South, New England, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. It was the most enjoyable trip I have ever taken, nevertheless I am glad to be at my own home again, daily walking in and out over its threshold.

There is no place like home, especially to the home-lover; and I am a home-lover. I greatly enjoy the independence of home life. I like to go to bed when I want to and get up when I am ready to do so, without feeling that I may be in somebody's way in doing so. I like eating eggs that my own hens put in the nest yesterday.

I want my bathroom next door to my bedroom, and when I bathe, I want to feel that no other world-beater is in a hurry for me to get out of the tub. O, I like that free and easy feeling that one can have in her own home; and it's good for one to go away on a long trip, like the one I have just returned from, to fully appreciate home.

I met a great many friends while away who did everything for my comfort they could, but it was impossible for them to make their home my home. It was their home, and they enjoyed it just as I do my home. One's home is the one place that no other home can fill. One's home is the best place, the most comfortable place, in which one can live.

A home is not a home where she lives alone. A home is not a home where she lives alone. It takes at least two—and three or four or half a dozen pure, sweet lives are better—to make a home.

My John and I are at home. I like our home. I like its situation, which is on a hill—not a big hill, hard to climb, but just a little swell of earth sufficient to keep us high and dry when it rains hard. This is an introductory letter to what I hope to give you of my trip at times later on.

SUSAN.

Susan, we did hope that trip would include the M. B. re-union. I heard several sisters expressing the hope that Susan would be there. Perhaps it was held a little too late in the season for you, but when you come East again, let us know so we can "reunite" assured of your good company.

Dear Aunt Madge:

The recipe for plain cake that I sent last week should have said two eggs. Can you rectify the mistake? I do hope the sisters have not tried it and failed. Many thanks for the orange marmalade recipe which is the same as the one I had lost. Instead of boasting that I am "All Done," as I did in my other communication, I am so humiliated at my negligence that I'll say—

"ONLY HALF DONE."

It is a good thing that you were minus one egg in that plain cake recipe, for I have read your "only half done" note several times all to myself, just to enjoy a laugh at the end of it, so it was a "good cheer" correction for me. But the niece making the cake will take notice of the change.

I notice the women's magazines of various kinds are bringing out directions and hints for making Christmas presents. If only people (or persons) would not attempt each year to make more elaborate articles than they did the preceding year, and thus cause the "burden of Christmas," as it has been expressed, to grow heavier, how much more the "season of good will" would be a happy season.

I wish we might have some personal testimonies as to the gifts which have been received in the past. Which gave the greatest pleasure on the whole? Which were oftenest used and so were the most useful? Were they always the expensive and elaborate gifts, or were they the simple presents for every-day use? I recall "match-scratches" used more than one cycle of 365 days; pin-cushions, aged but still convenient holders, of various sizes

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S
LIFEMade Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Bird Neighbors.

Under this head the American will from time to time print short articles relating to birds, and especially their relation to agricultural interests. Most of these articles will be reprinted from leaflets issued by the Bureau of biological survey, department of agriculture, or by the National Association of Audubon societies, and will be authoritative. They will be of interest not only to bird lovers, but of educational value to farmers, to whom the protection of many species of birds is of the greatest importance.

CHILDREN TO GUARD BIRDS.

Young Army will be Rallied by Public School Teachers. NEW YORK, October 23.—To enlist every American boy and girl in an army of young bird guards that may number millions, a conference of teachers from many parts of this country has been called in connection with the annual meeting of the National Association of Audubon societies on October 31 in this city.

Men and women representatives of the school workers have offered personally to attend this gathering, while many others are sending in their support and suggestions for lining up their young charges to study nature and fight for the protection of the native birds.

An advance guard of 10,000 children in the southern states has already been formed for this purpose by some 600 teachers, and with the support of the schools and the necessary fighting funds, the Audubon workers hope to establish forces of thousands more in every section of the United States.

As ammunition for the proposed child host, millions of pamphlets telling of the habits and uses of American birds, will be sent out from Audubon headquarters here. Armed with these and drilled in the study of nature, the boys and girls are to skirmish over their home country, feeding and providing shelter for the starving birds in winter and guarding them from thoughtless destruction by pot hunters.

In the training that it is intended to thus give the youngsters of every locality, educational authorities are to-day declaring that splendid results in the development of young minds and faculties can be obtained.

In Texas, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, Maryland and the Carolinas, the ten regiments of children already enrolled on the proposed basis of the Junior Audubon army are proudly wearing handsome buttons and are well drilled in the 200,000 nature-study leaflets that have been sent them with this insignia from Audubon headquarters here.

Each private in the little army has paid in a cent a month with which some of the expenses of the quartermaster's department are met. Special funds to maintain and extend such a child force throughout the country are now being raised by the Audubon workers, who assert that no branch of their work will yield better results for bird protection.

"The chief hope of saving the valuable and beautiful birds for this nation lies in the children who form the coming generation," says T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the National Association of Audubon societies. "Through our annual meeting will show increased adult membership and work in many other fields of bird protection, we believe the rally of our new army of children will mark the start of a most effective line of activity. The boys and girls are eager to help, and the idea is being taken up with enthusiasm by teachers everywhere."

Anti-Tuberculosis Association. Plans are nearly perfected for forwarding active work under the direction of the Maine Anti-Tuberculosis association, which was formed in Lewiston last spring. Dr. A. A. Downs, of Fairfield, secretary, reports an increasing interest throughout the State in this campaign.

President Codman, of Portland, is anxious to get out the directors appointed from over the State for a meeting as soon, this fall, as possible. This probably will be held in Waterville, with a business session in the morning, inspection of dispensary work and a visit to the new camp or sanatorium at Fairfield, and an address by some able worker in the tuberculosis fight from out of the State.

Among the directors are some of the most prominent men in Maine: C. F. Stinson, clegman, Waterville; Elmer P. Spoford, Deer Isle; Dr. William C. Peters, Bangor; Mrs. Maria W. Prentiss, Bangor; A. F. Donigan, Bangor; Rev. Henry L. Griffin, Bangor; H. L. Emery, Waterville; Frank L. Dingley, Lewiston, Dr. Ralph A. Parker, Auburn. Others are to be added to make a total of thirty on this board.

To Stop Joy Rides.

Among the newest safety devices just received at the American Museum of Safety is a small apparatus to prevent the chauffeur from over-speeding. The device can be fastened from the interior of the car by a key which sets the dial at the required limit per hour. A second-hand indicating the speed moves towards the first which remains fixed; when this point is reached it will immediately break the circuit of the magnet or the batteries of the firing system.

A bell warns the chauffeur that he is nearing the speed limit, so that he can reduce the rate without having the spark broken automatically by the speed arrestor. A signal dial hinged to the dial is usually turned down; on arriving within the city limits the dial is raised, thereby limiting the speed to the prescribed mileage for the section. The dial also registers the mileage.

The driving of the apparatus is done by an eccentric ring fastened to the front wheel of the car, and in turn connected with a flexible shaft to the main dial.

QUICK WON

Though There Was a Beginning to the Courtship Some Time Before

By F. A. MITCHEL

The summer was drawing to a close. The leaves had not yet taken on their autumn colors, but that haze one so often sees during the close of the hot months hung about the hills and the valleys.

A gentleman whose apparel bore a distinctive foreign cut alighted from a train at a railway station and, leaving his belongings, set out on a road leading to an attractive country place. On reaching the gateway, flanked by stone pillars, he noticed on one of them a sign, "No Trespassing."

He proceeded on the walk toward the house and, reaching a terrace where, through trees he could see an attractive vista, sat down on the grass, took out a cigarette and began to smoke. He was aroused by a feminine voice behind him.

"Did you not see the notice that no trespassing is allowed on these grounds?"

The gentleman arose and uncovered with ceremonious politeness.

"I did," he said.

"Then I do not understand why you should avail yourself of the place for lounging."

"To tell the truth, I have a strong prejudice against such notices."

"Why so?"

"For several reasons. Firstly, I question the natural right of any one to appropriate to his or her exclusive use any portion of the planet. But this is based on philosophic principles too deep to enter upon just now. Secondly, there is, I think, selfishness in refusing others the enjoyment of attractive and restful grounds."

"Perhaps if you owned a place like this and saw persons camping on it and injuring things you would feel differently."

"That would not alter the case, as I have stated it. I am capable of putting myself in your place and can appreciate your feeling."

"Oh, we don't own the place; we merely rent it."

"What kind of a person is the owner?"

"I don't know, never having seen him. He is a noble, good man."

"Is he handsome?"

"Why do you ask that?"

"A woman's idea of a man is often influenced by such matters."

A trifle of indignation flashed in her eye. "I assure you," she said, "that it is a very much more valuable trait than physical beauty that has prejudiced me in favor of Mr. Chenoweth."

"Chenoweth! That's an uncommon name. I am in very close touch with a man of that name."

"Our Mr. Chenoweth is abroad."

"That's where I met my Mr. Chenoweth."

"He's been traveling in Switzerland. We had a letter from him dated Geneva yesterday. He was to sail immediately for America."

"I made an ascent of Mont Blanc with my Mr. Chenoweth not a month ago."

"What's your friend's first name?"

"Bert."

"Albert? Our landlord is Albert B."

"That's it—Albert Borland Chenoweth."

"Isn't that strange that you should know him so well? Now, are you surprised that I have spoken so highly of him?"

"I certainly am surprised. I never saw anything in him to warrant such an encomium."

"You didn't? You are not very loyal to your friend."

"I didn't say he was any especial friend of mine."

"You said you are in very close touch with him."

"Did I? That doesn't necessarily mean that I admire him. But I am open to conviction. If you will give me your reasons for your own admiration you may succeed in planting it in me."

"Perhaps we had better go up to the house, since you know our landlord so well. I shall be pleased to offer you some refreshment."

"Thanks very much. I will go with you with pleasure."

When they were comfortably seated in the drawing room the lady said:

"Now I will tell you why I so admire Mr. Chenoweth. We and Mr. Chenoweth have a mutual friend, Mr. Chard. Father is a retired clergyman, and such, though they may be of the kingdom of heaven, are not usually burdened with worldly goods. Mr. Chenoweth had an opportunity to rent this place for a good sum. Mr. Chard, thinking it would be vacant, tried to get it for father for a nominal rental. When Mr. Chenoweth heard about it he told Mr. Chard that father might have it. What do you think of that?"

She gave a triumphant glance at her companion.

"Oh, Chenoweth, I suppose, feels that every well to do person should respect the cloth, and there's no better way of accomplishing that than by doing one's duty to the cloth. Chenoweth is a church member, and it is no more than right that he should give his share to the church's support. In letting your father have this place at a nominal rent he merely gave his share. I've no doubt he cut off some other contribution in the same line to make up for it."

"Well, I do think—"

She stopped. Words did not come fast enough to express her condemnation of such pessimism.

"There may be another reason for his action," continued the stranger, "a selfish reason. Now I think of it, he told me that he had heard of a very kind act by a young lady; that he had seen this lady at some function or other and had conceived a great admiration for her. He had asked to be presented to her, but just as the presentation was about to take place the girl took her departure. Chenoweth called the next day for Europe. I shouldn't be surprised if this girl and you were one and the same person. If so there was no generosity at all in your landlord's act. He simply made a gift to a lady he admired. We can all do that."

This statement seemed to interest the girl immensely. "Did he tell you her name?" she asked.

"I think I would know it if I heard it."

"It wasn't Cathorne, was it?"

"Seems to me it was something like that. Now, I remember; the first name was Marcia."

The lady's face was suffused with a becoming blush.

"Is that your name?" asked the stranger.

There was no reply, no need of a reply; the blush told the tale.

"I regret to have made a real trespass," he added, "not on Mother Earth, which we should all own in common, or that part of it which Chenoweth considers he owns, but on a private affair of yours. Now let us turn the subject on to something else."

But Miss Cathorne's feelings did not appear to be at all injured by the trespass, and she showed no disposition to change the topic of conversation.

"What kind of a looking person is Mr. Chenoweth?" she asked.

The stranger glanced at her with evident surprise.

"Why do you look at me that way?" she asked, with a slight blush.

"When you first spoke of your landlord—"

"Please don't call him our landlord; call him Mr. Chenoweth."

"Well, when you first spoke of Mr. Chenoweth, you said his looks were of no especial moment."

"I said that his kind heart was of greater importance."

"Well, all I have to say about Chenoweth's appearance is that he is a very ordinary looking man."

"Tall or short?"

"Rather on the beanpole order—something like me."

"Intellectual?"

"No. A theorist; very impractical. There's a bit of romance in his composition; just the fellow to perpetrate such a thing as he has in your case."

"Don't call it a thing, please; it's very lovely."

A maid came to the door and said the gardener would like to see Mr. Chenoweth.

"Mr. Chenoweth!" This came from Miss Cathorne. The stranger's face took on a very disturbed look.

"Mr. Chenoweth is not here," continued Miss Cathorne. "He may be here, though some time next week."

"David says, miss, that he saw Mr. Chenoweth coming up the walk with you."

The lady looked puzzled. The stranger arose from his seat, walked to a window and looked out. The gardener, who had been standing at the front door, came to the drawing room, and, making his way to the stranger, said enthusiastically:

"How do you do, Mr. Chenoweth? I'm mighty glad to see you back to the old place, sir."

"David," said the stranger, offering the gardener his hand, "you've given me away. I took a fancy to remain incog. for awhile, and you've spoiled it all."

"I don't know what that is, sir. When did you get back?"

During this bit of welcome landlord and tenant were, to say the least, an interesting sight. Chenoweth, who had drifted into the deception and thought that he could give the cause of his liberality without detection, was quite dumfounded at this exposure. He had forgotten that the gardener always went with the place. As for Miss Cathorne, she turned alternately red and white and didn't seem to know whether she was herself or some one else. When Chenoweth got rid of the gardener the two stood at either end of the room, both studying the figures of the rug.

Finally the man stole a side glance at the woman. Then he stole another and another. There was no evidence in her appearance that she would reopen the conversation. He must do so himself. But what was he to say? He had never intended such a denouement. It had all been so delightful, this talking about himself to one who did not recognize him, that he had been led, as it were, to the coping of a roof, where he had danced along at a giddy height with no more consciousness of his position than a somnambulist. He had been awakened by the gardener, and now the question was, Would he lose his balance?

Presence of mind saved him. He had brought on a premature love affair. The only thing to save him was to push forward to an immediate climax. Since he could not think of anything to say that would untie the knot, he yielded to an impulse of something to do. This was well, for in love impulses in the right direction are trump cards. He walked slowly across the room, and as he did so he half turned from him. Coming up behind her, he took her hand.

It was not withdrawn.

THE STATE OF MAINE AND THE UNITED STATES GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

The State of Maine and the United States Geological Survey are together spending thousands of dollars in constructing a great topographic map of the State. This map, when finished, will be of such dimensions that few, if any, halls in Maine will be big enough to hang it in. It will be about 32 feet high by 20 feet wide. For convenience, therefore, the map is being made piecemeal.

Each unit of survey is known as a quadrangle, comprising one-sixteenth of a degree of latitude and longitude—about 215 square miles—and a separate atlas sheet is published for each quadrangle surveyed. Twenty-seven quadrangles have already been surveyed and the maps published. These are located mostly in the southern part of the State, extending across it.

During the present season a United States Geological Survey party, under Hersey Munroe, a topographic engineer, has been mapping the Bethel quadrangle, the Bryant Pond quadrangle, and the Buckfield quadrangle, in Oxford and Androscoggin counties. These quadrangles are traversed by the Maine Central railroad and the Grand Trunk railway. Each quadrangle contains 213.72 square miles. Mr. Munroe has been assisted by R. A. Kiger and S. A. Judson, of the Geological Survey, and by field assistants, and has completed the work on the Buckfield and Bryant Pond quadrangles. The work on the Bethel quadrangle is well under way.

Almost everyone in Maine knows the value of the government's topographic surveys. The topographic map shows every physical characteristic of the area surveyed—every hill slope, valley and stream, and the altitude of every point. All the works of man are also portrayed by the surveyors in their exact relative position—the roads, the railroads, the bridges, even the houses. Any farmer who buys one of these maps may pick out his home and note its elevation above sea level as readily as the most experienced engineer. The map is useful to the farmer, to the tourist and huntsman, to the automobilist, and to the private surveyor or engineer—in fact, to everyone. Thousands of these topographic atlas sheets of the quadrangles in Maine have been sold, but the demand is constantly increasing.

The maps are indispensable in engineering development of any character. They have been well termed the mother maps of the country.

In accordance with an act of Congress, the topographic atlas sheets are sold by the director of the Geological Survey, at Washington, at the nominal rate of 5 cents a copy—the cost of paper and printing—or $3 a hundred if at least 100 copies of any map or maps are purchased. They are also sold by dealers in a dozen or more of the larger cities of Maine. The survey of the Buckfield, Bryant Pond and Bethel quadrangles is being carried on co-operatively by the State and the Federal survey, each paying one-half of the field expenses.

The Geological Survey at Washington also publishes an index map showing the quadrangles which have been mapped in Maine, and a copy of this will be sent free to anyone requesting it.

At Washington, in Knox county, last week, Miss Grace Curtis, aged thirty, died from injuries inflicted a few days before by her insane brother, Clarence, aged thirty-eight, with whom she lived. He was beating her dog with a rock when his sister interfered, and he turned on her, beating her about the head with the rock. Curtis was taken to the Maine asylum at Augusta.

The fertilizer plant and box-shook mill of the Seacoast Canning Co., at Eastport, were burned Friday. The buildings and contents were valued at more than $60,000 and were partially insured. A glue factory, operated by the Lane-Libby fish company, of Vinalhaven, occupied a part of the fertilizer building, and lost its entire equipment besides a large quantity of glue. The fire is supposed to have started around a boiler in the fertilizer plant. About 100 men are thrown out of employment.

To Boost Maine.

The new president of the State board of trade, Col. Boothby, and Secretary Blanding have issued a strong appeal to the local boards to get together, and push things, and it is likely that their advice will be followed. The letter reads thus:

As the State board of trade is now entering upon a new year, the executive officers extend greetings to the boards throughout the State. The State board commences its twenty-third year with the largest membership in its history, and while much has been accomplished in the years that are gone, it should be our aim to strive for still greater achievements. To this end the active cooperation of the half a hundred organizations in membership with the State board is invited. If each board of trade will inaugurate a vigorous campaign to promote the business growth and civic welfare of its home town, it will at the same time be helping along the advancing of the State as well, and by the united efforts all along the line, Maine will be given a tremendous uplift.

Under the auspices of the State board of trade the Maine 1920 movement has been successfully launched and each board throughout the State is urged to appoint a 1920 committee. When your committee is chosen, please promptly advise the State board secretary and we'll see that the secretary of the Maine 1920 committee is informed as to the membership of your local committee.

It should be the aim of the local committees to aid in all ways the advancement of their respective communities and also to co-operate with the Maine 1920 committee, which is officered as follows: Chairman, Frederic E. Boothby; general secretary, Robert J. Sprague; corresponding secretary, Carl Rust Parker; treasurer, Edward M. Blanding.

In addition to special sessions, the Maine 1920 committee will meet twice a year, the place of meeting being the same as the State board sessions and the date being the day immediately preceding the State board mid-winter session in March and the annual meeting in September. It is to be expected the local committee will forward twice a year written reports to the Maine 1920 committee, outlining what has been accomplished and plans for future action.

If there are boards of trade in your vicinity not in affiliation with the State board, please urge them to join; and if there are at times changes among the executive officers of your own organization, please promptly advise the State board secretary.

COUNTY GOSSIP.

Mrs. Arrie Higgins, of North Ellsworth, claims the record pullets of the county. They are laying at four and one-half months old.

The scare of Fourth of July are hardly healed, yet here is western Hancock county about starting in on its annual harvest of forty to fifty carloads of Christmas trees. Verily, as Josiah Allen's wife says, "tempus do fugit somethin' awful!"

Forest Commissioner Mace's dog, Hector M., does not like his new home in Augusta evidently. The station agent at Benton, twenty-two miles east of Augusta, found the dog, which had evidently started on his long tramp home, and returned him to Commissioner Mace.

Bar Harbor is making its annual prayer by petition to the Maine Central railroad for a night boat to connect with the late Pullman through the winter. Each year at this time the Maine Central, after listening to the petition, has very courteously laid it one side and taken the night boat off as before.

Here are two good hunting yarns from North Franklin: Dallas Tracy on Saturday killed three partridges with one shot. On the same day, Fred Abbott made a quick hunting trip. Leaving home after daylight, he drove eight or nine miles, went into the woods, shot a moose and was back to his team before noon.

Among the smart and highly-respected citizens of Orland, is Samuel Kitfield, who is eighty-one years old. He has raised and harvested ten bushels of oats, ten bushels of carrots, beets, turnips, twenty bushels of potatoes, 200 squashes and pumpkins, eight barrels of hand-picked apples, four tons of hay. He hired a man to assist only one day during the season.

Our North Penobscot correspondent writes: "Potatoes are nearly all harvested in this locality and the bulk of them hauled to market. The crop ranged from an absolute failure to 250 bushels an acre. In one or two instances 300 bushels were raised on an acre, and on one Harvey Leach raised 400 bushels of late-planted ones. Those planted late have done the best for the last three years. One fact stands out prominently: Potato bugs, weeds and grass must be subdued early and kept subdued to insure a profitable yield of spuds. Thorough previous cultivation, sufficient and oft-repeated spraying, just in the nick of time, choice seed, not less than a ton to the acre of standard fertilizer on partially depleted soils, are essential factors to a paying crop. The apple crop is quite good."

THE FISHERIES QUESTION.

Working of Laws Passed by the Last Legislature.

[Letter from Luther Maddocks, of Boothbay Harbor, to Kennebec Journalist.]

Will you kindly permit me, through your columns, to call the attention of the members of the legislature and the business public generally to some events that have transpired during this season in the fisheries along our coast.

It will be remembered that much of the valuable time of the last legislature was taken up by the discussion of matters relating to shore fisheries. The weir fishermen were claiming that they should be given a monopoly of the herring fishing and that no other method should be used than the old-fashioned stake weirs. They expended a large amount of time and money in the attempt to make it appear that weir fishing should be allowed and all kinds of net fishing should be prohibited.

The so-called Mayo bill was drafted along these lines and the promoters of this scheme came very near passing this bill. The opponents of the Mayo bill were very few. They had no money for any paid attorneys to defend them and it remained for a few of us to use our personal endeavors to show up this iniquitous bill, which we were successful in doing, and the legislature failed to give the Mayo bill or any of its substitute a passage.

The promoters of the Mayo bill were making loud statements in the State House lobby and the different hotels of Augusta that the purse and drag seine had destroyed the mackerel, menhaden and herring. Those of us who opposed the bill made the statement before the committee and elsewhere that the history of all kinds of fishing was subject to radical changes, and that there had always been years of plentifulness and scarcity and would be for all time to come. The three leading species (mackerel, menhaden and herring) have substantiated this statement this season.

This year will be a record breaking year for herring. It is difficult to find a market at any price for sardine herring. This condition has existed for weeks. The sardine factories have been overstocked with fish suitable for sardine purposes and the result will be the largest pack in the history of the business. The price to-day is hardly above the cost of production, and many of the factories are contemplating closing down on account of the enormous pack.

Now the menhaden appeared on our coast early in the season and are swarming along our coast to-day, which is very late for them to remain in our waters. It seems to be the unanimous opinion of our oldest menhaden fishermen that there never has been such an enormous body of extremely fat menhaden on this coast. They are from the capes of Virginia to the Bay of Fundy.

Thousands of barrels are taken daily along the shores of Lincoln and Cumberland counties, and sent to Long Island Sound to be converted into oil and guano. There is only one oil factory remaining in Maine, at Round Pond. There is also a ship that has been converted into a factory which has been doing an enormous business. It is reported that she is capable of converting 10,000 barrels a day into oil and fish scrap. There are more than a thousand men employed in the steamers and factories operating on the Maine coast, and the enormous order for food supplies is being appreciated by our provision dealers.

One dealer in Portland reported an order of fifty barrels of corned beef one day, and other things in proportion. Does this look like the menhaden being all caught up? After a continuous warfare on them for more than half a century with the most improved appliances for their capture, there seems to be more than ever before. It is true that they absented themselves from the coast of Maine for a number of years. The only reason that can be given is that the food for them was absent. This year an abundance of food has been visible all the season.

Large mackerel have shown in enormous quantities at times. There are only a few vessels engaged in mackerel fishing. Quite a number of mackerel have been caught around Monhegan. These fish, when they become full grown, are wild and hard to catch. The only way to catch them is by purse seine, as they have, for some reason unknown to man, refused to take the hook for more than a quarter of a century. A few small tinklers have been seen along the shores, and it may be possible that this enormous body of mackerel will deposit their spawn here and another year we will have an abundance of tinklers.

The migratory fishes that visit our coast need no protection, and the efforts of man cannot perceptibly diminish the supply. In the future the legislature, when called upon to make restrictive laws to govern the migratory fish of the sea, will be wise if they turn down any bill in which one class of fishermen is attempting to annihilate another.

Selling Ice 75 Years Ago.

In an old book lately picked up in an old bookstore was a well-preserved circular of the Pennsylvania Ice Co., bearing the date March 10, 1836. It is of curious interest as exhibiting the manner in which ice was sold in those days. The circular is headed in large letters, "Schuylkill Ice," and then follows:

"The Pennsylvania Ice Company will commence the delivery of superior Schuylkill ice on the first day of April next, to continue until the first of November. Customers may rest assured that there will be no deficiency in the supply, as near 400,000 bushels are secured in their extensive icehouses, which will be delivered early every morning during the season, at the following prices: 25 cents per week for a quarter peck per day, 37½ cents per week for a half peck per day, 50 cents per week for one peck per day. Or at 25 cents per bushel."

At the bottom of the sheet, which is here defective, it is pointed out that members holding five shares of the stock at $20 a share are entitled to half a peck of ice per day for the four months of summer in lieu of dividends.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A DRIVE AMONG THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.

[Written for THE AMERICAN by Alice Fyre Tozier, of Denver, Col., formerly of Sedgwick.]

Wednesday morning, Aug. 2, with twelve relatives and friends, we left Denver by team for a trip among the Rocky mountains. With a feeling that all was going well with us on our long-talked-of trip, as no hitch had occurred in our preparations, we set joyfully forth on stout wagons, loaded with tents, clothing and provisions and drawn by able horses, upon our first day's journey. This took us from Denver through the suburban town of Berkeley, through Fruitdale, a fruit-growing district, on to the town of Golden, noted for its beautiful scenery, fine industrial schools, school of mines, smelters and so forth.

As Golden is situated in the foot hills, it was but a matter of a few miles drive into Golden Gate canon before we came to our first camping ground.

The roads over which we travelled wound around the sides of the mountains, along the crests and down into the canons. Oftentimes the road-bed was so near the edge of the mountain-side that one could look down hundreds of feet into the canon below, and in one place it resembled "The Giant's Ladder" of the Moffat road, there being the three tracks, and those on the last team could (if they choose) look down upon the others, and the feeling of relief which one experienced as they reached the canon was great.

Our mode of conveyance gave us ample time to view the surrounding country, the cattle ranches, the mines, the timber, the mountain streams and lakes. The farther we advanced the wilder and grander grew the country, but all its grandeur could not sustain the body, so we, realizing what was to come by what we had passed, never failed to find some pleasant nook where we and our horses could eat dinner in comfort so that we might have the nerve and strength necessary for such a trip.

Black Hawk, our next camping ground, is a very old mining town. Its elevation is 8,032 feet. All along the sides of the road, which winds down the mountain-side into the canon where it is situated, can be seen the mines and prospecting holes of days gone by. A return of its old-time activity is looked for, as Eastern capitalists have become interested in the mines. The town is built on the sides of the mountains, the streets winding around as do the mountain roads.

In Black Hawk resides a Mr. Blake who left Rockland, Me., forty-five years ago for that country, and it was our pleasure to meet with him and from him we learned much of interest.

We went next to Central City, a mile distant, and located at the base of the Snow range. Its gold mines are very rich, the Gregory lode being the first discovered in Colorado. Its prosperity was very evident. As we gained the "High Line" in Central City, we were enabled to look about us in every direction, and as far as eye could reach we saw mines, ranches, streams and lakes lower down on the mountains.

For some miles we drove through a comparatively level country with ever varying scenes before us. We passed above Russell's gulch, a very thrifty mining town, and drove south towards Idaho Springs. From an elevation of about 9,000 feet we descended to the city, which is 7,543 feet above sea-level. The road by which we reached the city made all others fade, and as we went down many, many feet, we passed many mines, also went by the Newhouse tunnel, which extends for about five miles through the mountains to Central City. The main tunnel, with its branches, is twenty-five miles long.

After we reached the town we found it to be of a different class than the others, for it is quite a summer resort on account of the scenery and springs, as well as a mining town.

Driving three miles west of the town we pitched our tents near Clear creek in Clear Creek canon and only fourteen miles from the Continental divide. There we remained for two nights and a day, climbing the surrounding mountains visiting the mines and surrounding towns. We visited several mines, and in one went to the end of a 1,000-foot tunnel which was 2,000 feet beneath the mountain top. There we obtained specimens of gold, silver, lead, iron and copper.

Considerable of the country through which we travelled was timbered, particularly the park sections. As we turned homeward, driving through Idaho Springs to Bear Creek canon, we passed into the region of cattle ranges and quite extensive pine groves, but as we drew near the canon we realized we were not out of the mountains.

Being nearer the city, many people have cottages in the canon, while others tent as we did. Trout fishing is one of the attractions. Early Tuesday morning we left the camp for Denver, driving through the little town of Evergreen and on through the canon to Morrison. On account of its wildness of scenery this is a road much travelled by automobile parties.

Morrison is a very attractive resort, all of the rocks being red in color. It has a beautiful natural park, and on Mt. Morrison is an inclined railroad, also an automobile road to the top of the mountain.

From Morrison to Golden nothing of particular note is seen except Mt. Morrison, although those who have not been beyond the foot hills find much to admire. From Golden to Denver we simply retraced our steps, and being weary by our sojourn among the mountains and our long, hard day's drive, we as joyfully hailed the sight of home from which we had departed seven days before.

A Hancock County Company.
AUGUSTA, ME., Oct. 19, 1911.

To the Editor of the American:
I am enclosing a list of names of the men who were enlisted in Co. G, 11th Infantry Maine Volunteers, by the Hon. Parker W. Perry, of Ellsworth, fifty years ago this month, thinking that it might interest some of your readers in Hancock county, if you could find space for the names in your columns.

Of these men only eight returned with the regiment at the close of the war, and very few of them are living to-day. The regiment served four years, three months and ten days. Date of enlistment is given.

Oh, Rats!

Rats, rolls, wigs and switches which women wear, at least many of them which are made in New York, are manufactured under unsanitary conditions, according to the testimony of Miss Leonore O'Reilly at a meeting of the commission appointed by Governor Dix to investigate conditions obtaining in New York factories.

Miss O'Reilly said she had just inspected ten factories where human hair goods were made in ill-smelling rooms with poor ventilation. She found it the custom among employees to eat their lunches at the side of the worktables, with loose hair lying about.

"Most of the hair comes from China," the young woman declared, "and is dyed or colored blonde or any other color desired."

A Tribute.

MRS. LINWOOD H. CUSHMAN.
A beautiful spirit passed from earth when, on Oct. 18, Emily Smith Cushman breathed her last. Stricken at the home of friends even while rejoicing in happy harmony with the spirit of the hour, she was borne tenderly to her home, where without pain, she passed away in the first hours of evening. A great wave of sorrow and sympathy passed over the community when the news of her decease flew from lip to lip.

Not to all lives is it given to win so much of love and friendship as fell to her lot. Mrs. Cushman was born in Ellsworth on Nov. 15, 1851, and was, therefore, nearly fifty years old at the time of her death. Reared and educated in the city of her birth, the roots of her life sank deep into the familiar soil, and clung with rare tenderness to all the associations of the past.

On the twenty-second anniversary of her birth she was joined in marriage to Linwood H. Cushman, also a resident of Ellsworth. To them was born one child—a daughter, Julia, now Mrs. Alpheus C. Lyon. Mrs. Cushman's home life has revealed one of the most delightful aspects of her character. Absolutely devoted to her family, tenderly considerate of their welfare and happiness, her passing leaves a void beyond words in the domestic circle.

Early in her life she acknowledged the claims of the Christian religion upon her by uniting with the Congregational church of this city, of which she was a devoted and consistent member. Until her increasingly uncertain health made such labors impossible, she was associated actively with the work of the Sunday school, serving it in various capacities. It was a matter of great regret to her that her physical condition precluded the possibility in more recent years of a service so grateful and satisfying to her. Her struggle against ill health was a losing one from the beginning. The nature of her trouble had been revealed to her with startling distinctness; life here depended upon the most painstaking care; still, with face ever smiling for her friends, she moved with quiet cheerfulness in the narrowing sphere of action. Her face carried always to the world outside the same unruffled sweetness that her friends had learned to love and to expect.

Her sympathies were exceeding broad. The world of Nature was an open book for her. Summer and winter alike were beautiful to her, and no phase of the great world life touched her without meaning. The woods were a storehouse of treasure to her, and her rejoicing in them was continuous. Mrs. Cushman was also an instinctive lover of animals, and her domestic pets gave back to her an almost human affection. To those who knew this delightful trait in her character there was a world of pathos in seeing the great horse she had loved moving with slow tread before the mournful procession that conveyed her to the last resting-place, drawing the mass of lovely blossoms that were to be her shroud.

To these ties of Nature she added the devotion to books which is ever the proof of a cultivated mind. She was for years a member of the literature club, entering with zest into its work when health allowed. Thus did she keep the avenues of approach to mind and heart constantly open, drawing through each a weight of soul culture and elevation of the whole being. Not unexpectedly did the final blow fall; she had anticipated its coming for years. And when at last the summons came it met her with a smile upon her lips and peace within her heart.

The funeral service was held on the afternoon of Oct. 19, conducted by her pastor, Rev. R. B. Mathews. The crowded house bore eloquent witness to the love she had evoked while living, and the wonderful floral tributes afforded added proof. To her husband, daughter and aged mother the sympathy of the whole community goes forth in unmeasured volume.

Court finally adjourned for the term at noon Saturday. It has been a busy term, with something doing all the time. In all, 102 cases were disposed of—forty-three judgments; thirty-three divorces; twenty-three neither party; three dismissed. There were 154 new entries.

SMALL VS SWEETZER.

The case of Small vs Sweetzer, trial of which began last Wednesday, went to the jury Thursday afternoon. Verdict for defendant.

SINCLAIR VS TELEPHONE CO.

The case of George E. Sinclair, administrator of Lawrence Sinclair, against the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., to recover damages for the life of Lawrence Sinclair, who was killed at Bar Harbor last May, occupied the greater part of Friday. Peters & Knowlton and Charles H. Wood appeared for plaintiff; Hale & Hamlin for defendants.

Sinclair was killed while assisting to load a heavy reel of cable on a wagon. The cable was being rolled up on three telephone cross-arms laid from the ground to the wagon, when one of the cross-arms broke, allowing the reel of cable to fall over, pinning Sinclair beneath it.

The plaintiff introduced evidence of eyewitnesses of the accident, and tending to show that the foreman of the defendant company did not use proper precaution to shore up under the cross-arms, which were not of sufficient strength to stand the great weight of the reel.

After plaintiff's case was in, counsel for defendant moved for non-suit on the ground that plaintiff had failed to show that Lawrence Sinclair, upon whom as employee was the assumption of risk, had exercised the care necessary under the circumstances at the time of the accident.

Motion for non-suit was allowed and exceptions to ruling were taken by plaintiff.

This was the last case for a jury and the two juries were finally excused for the term Friday afternoon.

HEARINGS.

There were hearings in several cases before the Court. On petition for appointment of a guardian for George W. Whiting, evidence as to his physical and mental condition was taken out Friday evening, and the case argued Saturday morning. This case was on appeal from the probate court, which denied petition.

Decision of the Court was received today, as follows: "Appeal dismissed; judgment of lower court affirmed, with costs."

Peters & Knowlton appeared for appellant and D. E. Hurley for appellee.

The Court will render decision in vacation as of this term.

In the pauper case of the Inhabitants of Bluehill vs. Inhabitants of Ellsworth, heard by the Court Friday, decision was received today, judgment for defendant. E. E. Chase and Forrest B. Snow for plaintiffs; E. J. Walsh for defendants.

The case of Woodruff vs. Woodruff will go to the law court on brief statements.

I Remember, I Remember.

I remember, I remember,
The house where I was born;
The sight of that top-sided shanty
To-day would make me mourn.

The crooked little brick paved walk,
The henhouse in the rear,
With cabbage growing at the side,
And pig-sty rather near.

I remember, I remember,
The corn-cob father had;
(A five-cent piece of Navy plug
In those days made him glad.)
The old stove in the kitchen,
And father's stocking feet—
All that was prosperity
Swept us on Easy street.

I remember, I remember,
The pump in our back yard,
Where father watered all the stock
And found it rather hard.
But now he has found another way,
And needs no trough or pump;
He waters stock down on the "Street",
And makes the lambskins jump.

I remember, I remember—
But oh! The changes wrought
Are queerer than the little duke
That sister Helen bought!
Since father goes to twenty clubs
And mother has her set,
We have no use for mem'ry's art—
We're trying to forget!

Efficiency.
How Many Men Know how to Keep It at Par.
Thousands, yes, tens of thousands of men, grow old 10 years too soon.
If you are a man and realize that your efficiency is on the wane and that you are losing money and happiness in consequence, get a 50-cent box of M.I.O.-N.A. stomach tablets to-day and take two after or with each meal for three days; then take one with each meal regularly until you feel well and vigorous.
M.I.O.-N.A. stomach tablets disinfect, tone up, restore elasticity to the stomach and intestinal canal and end indigestion. They do more; they increase the nutrition of the body, and in case of nerve exhaustion, sleeplessness, night sweats, bad dreams or any condition that requires a restorative, they act with astonishing rapidity. They can be found at G. A. Parcher's and helpful druggists the world over.

HOW OLD PEOPLE

May Prolong Their Lives

At an advanced age waste is more rapid than repair. The organs act more slowly and less effectively than in youth. The circulation is poor, the blood thin and watery, the appetite poor and digestion weak.

We want to say to every aged person in this vicinity that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) will prolong life. It creates an appetite, aids digestion and makes good blood. In this natural manner Vinol retards waste and replaces weakness with strength, giving new life to the worn system.

If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.
